DETAILED ACTION

Entry of Amendment

1. Applicant's amendment, filed on January 7, 2003, as paper No. 8, is acknowledged. Claims 1 and 5-19 are currently pending.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

-Claims 1, 5, 7-10, 12, and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Roberts et al. (US 5,320,099), and in view of Wehrli et al (US 4,777,957).

Roberts teaches the following structures:

- Applying a constant rf and magnetic field gradient, which would inherently perturb arterial spin of blood flow and reflect off the sample so it would be detected. (Column 15, lines 18-22 and column 21, lines 20-34)
- Acquire first tagged image (Column 21, line 40).
- Apply a second amplitude-modulated rf at 60 Hz (column 15, lines 30-38), understood to mean applying rf signals having periodic or intermittent amplitudes
- inversed rf and magnetic field gradient, which together would inherently mimic effects of constant RF radiation unrelated to blood flow, regardless of whether it is the intended effect. (Column 22, lines 4-9)

Art Unit: 3737

- Acquiring a second untagged image. (Column 21, lines 40-45)
- Generating difference signal based on first and second image representing blood flow image. (Column 8, lines 50-55 and column 21, lines 43-46.)
- Waiting a transit delay period, which is interpreted as an echo delay, (Column 19, lines 10-43) or a trigger delay. (Column 19, lines 44-63)

However, Roberts fails to teach determining of a duration of transit delay. Wehrli teaches a method for measuring and imaging fluid flow, comprising the waiting of a transit delay period before acquiring images, (Column 2, lines 1-49 and column 12, lines 1-35) as well as determining time delay T_A . (Column 12, lines 30-35) It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to adapt the Wehrli's teachings to Roberts's method such that a blood perfusion image may be generated.

-Claims 6, 11, and 14-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Roberts et al and Wehrli et al., as applied in claim 1 above, and further in view of Mistretta et al. (US 5,408,180)

Roberts and Wehrli meets all the claims except that it fails to teach analog/digital conversion of MR signals. However, it is well known in the art of MR imaging that analog MR signals undergo analog-to-digital conversion, as Mistretta et al. shows (Column 7, lines 13-30) so that a processed subtraction image can be generated.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1 and 5-19 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
